Greetings from the officers and board members of the Arkansas Genealogical Society!

Our society was organized almost 40 years ago with triple goals in mind. First, we wanted to provide our state with a publication that would serve as a medium for exchanging information on Arkansas, Arkansas families, and Arkansas genealogy. Since, 1962 the Arkansas Family Historian has met this goal time and time again. Thanks to our hardworking editor, this issue is again full of possible information concerning your Arkansas ancestors. Where else can you find this caliber of credible information from across our state? Where does this information come from? It comes from members such as you. If you have information from a family Bible, an abstract of Arkansas county records, or copies of Civil War letters concerning your family that you would like to share with others, send the information along to our editor for possible publication. If you have a query about your family, send it along as well. We exist to help you, our far-scattered members.

Secondly, soon after its organization, the Arkansas Genealogical Society saw the need to provide our members, libraries, and archives across the nation with additional Arkansas source material. Some 30 years ago, our society entered what has become an ongoing publications program. Our first two volumes, dealing with Arkansas Townships and Arkansas Post Offices, quickly became classics. Often imitated, they have proved their worth repeatedly and are still in print. Toward the end of this issue, you will find our Book Store listing for all of our publications. One of the most far reaching of our publications has been the microfiche publication of several indexes to Arkansas death records from 1914 to 1949. In the near future, we will add to our publications an index to Arkansas birth records that date from before 1902. These are some 60,000 or so "prior" or delayed birth certificates that were recorded with the State Department of Health in 1942 and 1943. They have not been available before. We feel that this upcoming index will revolutionize research into Arkansas Family History. Keep an eye out for upcoming publication information.

Thirdly, the Arkansas Genealogical Society has long been committed to the prospect of continuing genealogical education. From the very first our annual meetings have emphasized classes and workshops on family history research. Your writer fondly remembers many an early lecture dealing with basic research concepts, followed by an informal sack lunch. Since those early years, our venues have often changed and our speakers have always been varied, but we are still offering opportunities for learning more and more about researching our Arkansas ancestors. Elsewhere in this issue you will find a complete description of the 2001 edition of our annual Fall Genealogical Workshop and Book Fair. It will be held at the popular Airport Holiday Inn in Little Rock. Plan to attend if you can. Also, keep an eye out for even more educational opportunities. At the present, we are working on a series of free workshops called "Genealogy 101," aimed at helping Arkansas librarians and library workers understand genealogy and genealogists. If you would like to help with any of our educational projects, contact me at the address below. As always, good ancestor hunting.

Dec. 4, 1884

Mr. Julius Robb, of Montgomery county, was killed by a meteor passing through his body.

It fell through the branches of a tall tree under which he was standing, cutting off some of the limbs like a cannon ball. It struck him in the back of the neck near the shoulder, passed through his body and buried itself in the ground at his feet.

It was composed of iron pyrites, was nearly round and about the size of a teacup. - taken from the Little Rock

My Family Tree

I climbed my family tree and found
It wasn't worth the climb
And so I scrambled down convinced
It wasn't worth the time
Some branches on my tree I found
Were rotten to the core
And all the tree was full of sap
And hung with nuts galore
I used to brag my family up
Before I made the climb
But truth compels me now to tell
Of those not worth a dime
I beg my friends who boast aloud
Of ancestors so great
To climb their family tree and learn if those who weren't so straight
I've learned what family trees are like
That's why I scrambled down
They're like a "tater vine" because
The best are underground.

Learning and Genealogy

By John T. Humphrey, Director,
NGS
LearningCenterhumphrey@ngsgenealogy.org

Most family historians launch a search of their family history by acquiring information on relatives. It does not take long until they also discover they need to acquire the skills necessary for the job.

Learning how to research one's ancestors can encompass a variety of skills. For the beginning family historian, it can be as simple as discovering how to fill in a pedigree chart or finding a new record source, say undertaker's records.

Genealogists working at the intermediate level face problems that are very different. Here the family historian may need to learn how to "glean" indirect evidence from U.S. census records or learn language skills—the ability to write succinctly. Even advanced or seasoned genealogists have skills to learn—they may need to acquire the ability to read a foreign language or obtain some knowledge of seventeenth-century law. So, genealogists at all levels are constantly learning.

The need to acquire the skills necessary to properly research one's forebears is one reason why education has become linked with genealogy. It is also the reason why education has become closely associated with the National Genealogical Society. In fact that is the reason why some have said the mission of NGS is education!

Education for the family historian is never-ending because the family historian's research problems are constantly changing. With each generation or new family, the researcher faces new obstacles. As the family historian proceeds back from the nineteenth to the eighteenth centuries, for example, research becomes more difficult because fewer records are available for study.

The changing problems researchers face are not limited to time, but also to place. Genealogists may be confronted with a new set of obstacles because an ancestor may have moved. If an ancestor living in Virginia in 1790 moves to Ohio in 1810, any researcher tracking that family will have to learn the details of two different land grant systems—state and public. Those family historians will also need to study the differences in the survey schemes associated with each land grant process. But obstacles associated with an ancestral move are not limited to land records; they can be found in other areas of research as well, including those related to probate.

Some obstacles are more easily overcome than others. Those that are more difficult are frequently described as “The Brick Wall Experience.” Family historians need to recognize this not as an obstacle, but a challenge, one that can frequently be overcome through learning. A seemingly impossible situation is created, for example, when the family historian runs out of usable records—records that enable the family historian to link generations based on statements of fact. Any genealogist might be able to overcome that obstacle by learning something about methodology: that family historian, for example, could learn how to surmount the obstacle with indirect evidence.

Learning in genealogy is not only ongoing, but it also requires specialization. Most family historians will discover that in order to solve a particular research problem they need an exacting skill, one that is directly related to the issue at hand. As an example, a researcher may have tracked his ancestors back to seventeenth-century England and in order to find records on that family, the researcher has to learn how to read old script.

The successful genealogist develops skills that are also very personal. All triumphant family historians develop an ability to look at problems creatively. They may look for new record sources located in obscure repositories, or they learn to make use of all information found in a record. As an example, a genealogist looking for a baptismal record may ignore the names of the sponsors who were present at the baptism because the object of the search was the names of the parents. That family historian may not realize the sponsors were the infant's grandparents!

Successful family historians also learn to understand their own research habits. As an example, the fun of genealogy is finding a record that has been the object of an intense search—a search that may have taken years. Many family historians after finding that all important record discover later they did not copy all of the information, or they did not cite the source properly.

It is natural to experience exhilaration when an important record is found, which is the reason why the record was not copied or cited correctly. In order to get around this kind of problem, the family historian needs to develop better research habits—those habits can be something as simple as learning to go back over newly discovered records after the elation has subsided.

Other personal skills include the ability to ask the right questions. Successful family historians also foster the talent to be good listeners. Family historians, wanting to succeed, recognize that “yes, but” arguments get limited results. They also recognize assumptions frequently get in the way of finding solutions. Assumptions as they relate to surnames are a classic example. It is possible to assume a family with the surname Carpenter, had its origins in Great Britain, when in fact, its origins were German. The family name, which was originally

Zimmerman, was changed to its English equivalent.

Family historians need to understand learning in genealogy is ongoing and comprehensive. It never stops! The National Genealogical Society and its genealogical learning center are here to partner with its members and the genealogical community in their development as genealogists. NGS through its courses, conferences, and research trips wants to teach genealogists learning is ongoing, and it is the way to solve some seemingly impossible research problems.

A Guide to Understanding and Using Federal Census Records

Submitted by John E. Ernest, 4407
51st Ave. NE, Seattle, WA 98104-
4932

My Background

I have thirteen years' experience in genealogical and family research. I am currently conducting a Single Surname Study having extracted more than 46,000 census records of the surname Ernst, Ernest, Earnest and its variations. Genealogical Aid at the Pacific-Alaska branch of the National Archives in Seattle. Graduate of the Univ. of Washington. Graduate of the National Genealogical Society's "American Genealogy: A Basic Course." Conducted Federal Census as a Field Operations Supervisor(FOS) for the 1990 Census year. A lecturer at the Fiske Genealogical Foundation (beginning and advanced Census Research). Published articles include "We Are Cherokee - A Case Study," "George M. Dempsie - Pioneer Photographer" and "A Murder in Lena."

Working Back Through Time

The most efficient and effective method to research family history using census records is to begin with latest Census Records(1920) and work backwards, census year by census year. This then provides the researcher with a picture of his family as it evolved and as the composition of a family changed over time. In 1920 as example, the family may contain a mother-in-law, and uncle or Aunt, brother or sister, cousin or nephew, and sons and daughters in-law. This then can provide other surnames related to your family.

Before You Begin - What information Do You Need?

As a Genealogical Aid at the Seattle Branch of the National Archives, we encounter many patrons who arrive with only a vague notion of what they are looking for and unprepared to use our resources. One of the many problems facing the beginning researcher is where in the census do I need to look to find my ancestor. Where was the person I am looking for in 1920? Some preliminary research is necessary. There are many kinds of records that can be obtained such as obituaries, death certificates, Social Security applications, marriage records, a family bible, city directories and county histories. All of these records will contain names, dates and places. This information allows the researcher to focus on a particular person and place.

Why Were Census Records Created?

Census records were created primarily to count the people living in the United States to determine representation. Secondly, they can be used for allocation of Government monies and for statistical analysis. Census records were not created for genealogical purposes. There was no attempt at accuracy or verification of information obtained. There are records that contain conflicting information but such information does not appear to have been a major concern to the census taker. The primary objective of the census taker was to complete the census form. The information contained in census records must therefore, be verified.

Some Prospective on Census Records

Life is not perfect, and neither are Census Records. The creation of a census record is the result of the verbal interaction between two people. There is the "census taker"(enumerator) whose task it is to gather specific data from each household and enter that information on a specific form. The enumerator may or may not understand exactly what was required or how to ask each question correctly. The "informant" is the person in a household that provides the information based on questions asked by the census taker. The informant may have various levels of knowledge concerning each family member in that household. The informant may be the husband or the wife, and older child, or a relative. Sometimes it could be a neighbor, a house sitter, a landlord or other person loosely connected to the household. The enumerator's job is to determine the credibility of the informant to determine the acceptability of the information.

The Informant

Using my own family as an example, I would start by looking up my mother in the 1920 Census. I know that my mother lived in Mason City, Iowa in 1920. From this census record I note that my grandfather, Jess Bell was 45 years old and he and his parents were all born in Iowa. My grandmother, whose given name is not listed was 38 years old and she and her parents were all born in Iowa. My mother Margaret is listed with the record indicating that she was nine years old. Except for Margaret's name and age, the rest of the record is incorrect. None of the people mentioned in the Census record were born in Iowa. My grandfather Jess was born in Delavin, Wisconsin, in 1870. Mary Bell, his wife, was born in Herkimer, New York in 1872. My mother Margaret, was born in Minneapolis, Minn.

How could it be that the errors as described, could be made? The informant in this household in 1920 was a teenage servant girl. In her experience, the Bell family had always lived in Iowa. She assumed therefore that the Bell family had been born there including their parents. The enumerator probably had no reason to doubt the informant. Relying on this Census information would lead the researcher to look in the wrong place for Jess and Mary and their parents. It is also noted that Margaret is the daughter of Jess and Mary Bell. This is also incorrect in that Margaret E. Bell was the adopted daughter of Jess and Mary. The relationship code in column 6 of the census form should have been "AD" for adopted daughter. In that the adoption of Margaret was never discussed in the family, it is understandable that the informant did not know this.

Family Clusters

It is common in rural areas to find allied families living nearby. It is important therefore, to check for related families possibly living next to or near your family of interest. I found my grandfather Thomas H. Ernest in the 1920 Oklahoma Census living in Garvin County. His wife is Willa and children are Edward(my father), Clarence, Mary, Lucy and Thomas' mother-in-law

Mary Sliger. At some point we want to find Mary Sliger with her husband in an earlier census. My grandfather's marriage certificate indicated that he was married in December 1909 in Garvin Co., Oklahoma. We find him and his wife Willa in the 1910 Oklahoma Census for Garvin County, family # 76. We also discover on this same census page, family #78 which has Mary C. Sliger and her husband William D. Sliger along with their two children, Hattie and Olgarnian F.(Uncle Ott). My dad often spoke of his Uncle Fred and Aunt Lucy Keiner. We also find them on this page also, family #72, with their father Frederick W. Keiner. We know from oral family history that Mary C. Sliger is the daughter of Frederick W. Keiner.

Verifying information

Even though the Census record may appear to be correct, it is necessary to verify the information you are relying on in your research. Census Records can be misleading because these records contain only limited information concerning the household.

The 1920 Census record for William Rosenberger, living in Lynchburg, Virginia, lists himself, his wife Maud V., age 37, and their four sons, William, Jr., Joseph, Paul E. and Bernard. In addition, Nanny Earnest(a widow), William's mother-in-law is also living in this household. This would lead one to believe that William's wife maiden name was Maud Earnest, Nanny's daughter. However we should verify that this is correct. We would therefore look in a prior Census to find Nanny Earnest living with her husband. Because Maud(Earnest?) Rosenberger was born in Virginia, we would first look at earlier Virginia census records.

In the 1900 Virginia Census for Amherst County we find William Earnest with his wife Nanny. However this Census record indicates that Nanny is William's second wife. According to this record, William and Nanny have only been married for three years. In this household are what appears to be Nanny's children who bear the surname of Watts. Therefore, Maud V. Watts, who is 17 in 1900, is the wife of William Rosenberger in 1920.

In that we have this discrepancy, further verification is required. We note that William and Maud's sons are all born between 1909 and 1914. One would think that at least one of their children may have lived to collect Social Security. In checking the Social Security Death Index, we find Paul E. Rosenberger. The Social Security application for Paul E. Rosenberger, which he filed on 30 November 1936, indicates that his mother's maiden name was Maud Watts.

Expect the Unexpected

"I can't find my ancestor in the Census, but I know he was there." This is one of the common problems we experience with our patrons at the National Archives. It is always possible that a person was missed by the enumerator. However, I always take the positive view that the person is somewhere in the Census. My namesake John Edward O'Grady was a dentist in northern Iowa. He practiced in several counties and was in Schaller(Sac Co.), Iowa in 1917. John Edward and his wife Clemence were well known and were quite popular. In that he lived in town, it is unlikely that he would be missed in the Census. However, John Edward O'Grady does not appear in the 1920 Iowa Census. In that he did not die until 1926, where would he have gone? A line by line search of Schaller and Sac County, failed to reveal the presence of the O'Grady household. In addition, the Soundex for 1920 Iowa does not show a John E. O'Grady household.

A search of the Soundex Records for nearby States, particularly Minnesota, where he owned several farms did not show a John E. O'Grady. The surprise came when reviewing microfilm copies of the Schaller Herald in which the September 4, 1919 edition indicated that on September 5th, the following day John Edward and his wife Clemence were leaving for Mercedes, Texas. The 1920 Texas Census for Hidalgo Co. indicates that J. E. O'Grady and his wife Carrie were living in Mercedes, Texas.

The 1910 Federal Census

A major problem with this Census is that many of the northern states were not indexed (soundex), Minnesota being one of them. My grandfather, George Dempsie and his family lived in Minneapolis, Minnesota in 1910, the year my mother was born. How then can we locate the Census record for George Dempsie in Minneapolis in 1910? In checking the City Directory for Minneapolis, we find that George Dempsie, a professional photographer, lived at 316 Nicollet Avenue. Enumeration District (ED) descriptions are contained on microfilm series T1224. We need then to make a list of those Enumeration District's that contain any reference to Nicollet Avenue and the streets bordering Nicollet Avenue, such as Washington and Hennepin Avenues.

On Roll Number 33 of series T1224, we find a description of the Enumeration Districts for Minnesota, including Minneapolis. We find that Nicollet Avenue is referenced in ED 79, 80, 84, 85, 91 and 99. Each one of these Enumeration Districts was checked with no results. This is not an unusual situation. Some EDs do not have a complete description. However, we do know that we are in the right range of numbers. In checking ED 87, p. 42, we find the George M. Dempsie household living at 316 Nicollet Ave.

The Role of the Enumerator

It is not generally understood what happens in the field that could cause enumerators to fail to carry out their instructions. One written instruction that you do not see in the instructions to the enumerators is to make sure that each question on the Census form is answered.

Understanding why this process sometimes goes awry will give you some understanding of why errors are made in Census records. I call your attention to the 1900 Census record for Theodore Roosevelt. In the course that I teach concerning Census records I use the example of the 1900 Census record for Theodore Roosevelt as it relates to the understanding of relationship codes. My point is to make it clear that those relationship codes only apply to the head of the household. They do not apply to the wife. This census record lists Theodore Roosevelt as head of household and his occupation as Governor of New York. It also lists his wife Edith and six children. The record also indicates quite clearly that Theodore and Edith have been married for 17 years. Their oldest child Alice is 16 years of age on her last birthday. To many this would look like a perfect record. We should also note that if you subtract 16 from Edith's age of 38, this number would fall between 15 and 45 which would be the childbearing years of a female for that time. If Alice were the daughter of Edith, Alice would have been born when Edith was 22. That's OK.

It does however contain an important error, if you are a descendant of Alice (Roosevelt) Longworth. This record would lead you to believe that Alice was the daughter of Edith. The fact is that Edith had not been married to Theodore for 17 years, but only 13 years. We should at this time perform another test. It is easy to misread one number for another. We need to verify that the 7 in 17 is actually a 7 and not a 3 or a 4. We look on this Census page for a number that contains a 7 that we can compare. It just so happens that the Enumeration District (ED) number is 723. This 7 is identical to the 7 in the number of years married.

How could this error occur? I seriously doubt that Edith would have told the enumerator that she had been married to Theodore for 17 years. Edith was of course Theodore's second wife. His first wife was Alice Hathaway Lee who married Theodore 27 October 1880 and who died as a result of complications of childbirth on 14 February 1884. Their daughter was named Alice who was 16 at the time of the 1900 Census. Theodore married Edith Carow in December 1886. The Census record, based upon the number of years married (17), would suggest that Alice was the daughter of Edith. Based upon my personal experience, I suggest the following scenario.

The enumerator was John H. K. Oakley, age 49, who was a local Real Estate Broker. When Mr. Oakley visited the Roosevelt residence, I doubt that Mrs. Roosevelt (Edith) would have discussed family business on her front porch. Being the gracious person that she was, Mr. Oakley was probably invited into the home of the Governor, even offered some refreshment. Mr. Oakley was most likely nervous in talking to the wife of the Governor and he forgot to ask Mrs. Roosevelt how long she had been married. Enumerators are instructed that before they turn in their completed forms, they are to review the forms to make sure that they are completely filled out. Mr. Oakley, in checking his census forms later, discovered that he failed to ask the question as to the number of years married. Understandably he did not want to go back to the Roosevelt residence to ask a single question when the answer was obvious. He merely wrote in the number 17 (16 + 1) as a logical answer. Who would know the difference? Who would care?

Native American Research - 1900 Oklahoma Census

This is a popular census year for those who are trying to "prove" their Indian ancestry. I was very excited when I found my g-g-grandmother Lizzie Moore in this census. She is living in Pottawatomie County, Oklahoma. In her household are her granddaughters Bettie, Myrtle and Nettie Earnest. The census record indicates that Lizzie was born in Indian Territory and was "Indian."

This record confirmed our oral family history. I immediately checked the Dawes and Guion Miller Rolls for her name (see References Sources). Much to my surprise I did not find her listed on either of these Rolls. If in fact she was born in Indian Territory (Oklahoma) and was listed as an Indian, why was she not on the Rolls? The point to be made here is that census records may appear to be correct, but can be misleading. I think it is generally understood that when we speak of "Indian Territory," we mean Oklahoma. Subsequent research indicated that the informant was referring to a different place.

I found a clue in the census record of her daughter Amanda Earnest Riley who was living with her husband Chatman in 1910 in Hughes County, Oklahoma. According to that record, Amanda was born in Arkansas. In the 1900 Census that I referenced, the informant had indicated that Lizzie Moore was born in Indian Territory. What I believe is that the informant, who may not have been Lizzie herself, was referring to the fact that between 1818 and 1828, part of the northwestern part of Arkansas (Ozark Plateau) was known as the Cherokee Tract. The informant (maybe Lizzie's oldest granddaughter) may not have been aware that the Cherokee Tract had been terminated in 1828. In that Lizzie Moore was born after 1828, in 1835, she could not have been born in that Indian Territory. Lizzie and her daughter Amanda were born in Arkansas. They were therefore, citizens of the United States, even though they are of Indian descent.

Indian Citizenship

Some people may never be able to prove Indian heritage. The Indian law usually dictated that 'when any citizen shall remove with his effects out of the limits of the Indian Nation, they automatically become a citizen of another government, therefore all his rights and privileges as a citizen of this nation shall cease, provided nevertheless that the National Council shall have power to re-admit any such person who may at any time desire to return to the nation, but no one is entitled as an inherent right to re-admission to citizenship.' The translation of this is: if an applicant proved that at one time they were a recognized citizen of the nation, but had forfeited that citizenship, there was no law by which they could have demanded readmission to citizenship.

As a matter of course, the same laws and usages governed the Dawes commission in their consideration of claims to citizenship. These laws, however, are not unique just to the Indian tribes or even to the United States. It was (and normally is) the universal Common Law- that if a person leaves the country of their nativity and establishes themselves in another country, their citizenship in the country of their origin is not guaranteed. Further, the children born in the new country to those emigrants are legally citizens of the country of their birth. This means that if a person, for whatever reason, had been separated from the country of their birth (the "Indian Nation") and had settled in another country ("the United States"), they forfeited not only their own rights to citizenship in the country of their nativity, but that of their descendants---- forever.

These laws have been challenged in the U.S. Supreme Court and on the floor of the Congress of the United States---- and each time they have been affirmed”.

The Census Taker - Following Instructions

Many researchers assume that census takers always follow their instructions (see Research Sources). An example of this misunderstanding is the 1890 Veterans Census for Oklahoma. The Census instruction as to who would be enumerated is contained on the Census page. This instruction reads as follows:

“Note----- The provision of the act of March 1, 1889, under which this special enumeration of survivors of the war of the rebellion is made, reads as follows: ... cause to be taken on a special schedule of inquiry... the names, organizations, and length of service of those who had served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States in the war of the rebellion...”

Looking at these records, it would be noted that both Union and Confederate soldiers were enumerated. Subsequent to the forms being completed, the records relating to the Confederate soldiers were crossed out (but fortunately still readable). We don't know today why this would have occurred, but based upon my own personal experience of having conducted a Census, I offer the following. It is not unusual for changes to written instructions being made after the forms are printed. At what level of government such a decision might have been made, I couldn't say. I do believe that the enumeration of the Confederate soldiers was intentional at the time the census was made, but corrected later.

Also, in this Veterans Census for Oklahoma there is a record for a Fred Kiner. Fred is shown to have served in the 19th Kansas Cavalry from 19 October 1868 to 10 April 1869. It should have been clear to the enumerator that Fred did not serve in the “war of the rebellion” based on that record. Why did the enumerator create this record contrary to instructions? Why indeed!

The Strange Case of Egbert French

Occasionally there are discrepancies between family history and Census records. Two ladies came into the National Archives one Friday afternoon when I was on duty. They came from across state. They brought with them several notebooks full of family information. The information included birth and death records, family group sheets and some written family history and had been assembled during the early 1900s. They stated that the only thing lacking in their documentation was census records. They wanted to verify that their ancestor Martha French who was born in 1875 was the daughter of Egbert and Susanna French. This should be easy I thought, based on the documents they showed me.

In checking the 1880 Census for Klickitat County, Washington, we find Egbert French and his wife Angeline. The children listed were Susan, age 14, Rebecca, age 11, David, age nine, Annie, age six, Medina, age three and Albert, age one. No Martha. They then stated that Susanna French was Egbert's first wife and the mother of Martha.

We then checked the 1870 Census and we found Egbert and Angeline, Susan, age four and Rebecca, age two in Yakima Co., Washington. From this record it appears that Angeline was Egbert's wife in 1870 and in 1880.

I leave it to the imagination of the reader to determine what took place in this situation. It would not be uncommon for the keeper of family records to ignore some past indiscretion assuming that there probably never would be a need for such records to be verified.

Fact vs. Judgment

In the 1850 Census for Bedford County, Pennsylvania, we find Michael Earnest, age 25. In his household is his wife Hester and their children, Alexander, Catherine, Mary and Ann. According to the 1860 Census for this family, we find Hester, Alexander, Catherine, Mary and Ann. Michael is no longer in this household. What happened to Michael Earnest? What note should I make for my family records in this situation? You might decide that because Michael does not appear in 1860 Census for Pennsylvania that he is dead. This is a "judgment." The "fact" is that Michael does not appear in the 1860 Pennsylvania Census, and your records should reflect this fact.

Know your History

If you have assumed that Michael is dead, you would spend some time looking for cemetery records, a death record, an obituary, a probate record or a tombstone inscription to verify his death. However, if you assumed that Michael was not dead, then you might ask "where would Michael have gone?" Why would Michael have left his family? Where might he be in 1860? Consider the historical events of this time period. California gold rush? We might first look in California for 1860. This seems like a long way from eastern Pennsylvania to California at a time when there was no train travel. However, we do find Michael, age 36, in Amadore County, California. Michael's occupation is listed as a miner and is living in the household of Paul Shumway, also from Pennsylvania.

Looking for Clues

Many years ago when I discovered that my gg grandfather John Hundley Earnest lived in Hanover County, Virginia, I made a copy of his Census record. This record indicates that his wife was Lucy Ann, age 46, and their children were Harriet Jane, age 18, William B., age 15, Henry Clay, age seven, Charles B., age five and my great-grandfather Edwin, age three. I had this record for several years before it occurred to me that children may be missing from this record. There are no children between William B., age 15(1835) and Henry Clay, age seven(1843). After having looked at many census records, this seemed unusual. Suspecting that one or more children had died, I looked for an obituary. I found an obituary in the Religious Herald(Oct. 26, 1843) which stated that three of John H. Earnest's children had died of scarlet fever. One of those was "Charles Whitlock Earnest, fourth son of John H. Earnest and second son of Lucy Ann Earnest, who died on the 17th of October."

Who Was Charles Whitlock?

Could it be Lucy Ann Earnest's father was Charles Whitlock? In the 1810, 1820 and 1830 Virginia Census for Hanover County, I found a Charles Whitlock. Additional research has proven that this Charles Whitlock was the father of John H. Earnest's wife Lucy Ann. In this case the "clue" was something that was not in the census record.

Richard Dempsie was born in Ireland - but where?

A very common problem in genealogical research is determining the exact place of birth for an ancestor. The census taker was only required to ask for the State or Country of origin. With respect to foreign-born ancestors, the census taker would indicate only the name of the country, such as in the case of Richard Dempsie, Ireland(1860 Wisconsin, Columbia Co.). But where in Ireland? Ireland has many counties and it would be difficult, time consuming and expensive to research each county. A possible answer here is to track down each of Richard's children and check their census records for Richard's place of birth. Unfortunately Richard died in 1864 so we have only one census record with him in the household.

The 1880 census record for Richard's daughter Carrie Dempsie Heinze, also indicated that her father Richard was born in Ireland. Richard's son Richard in the same census year indicated that his father was born in New York. However the 1900 census record for Richard's other son, George M. Dempsie, indicated that his father was born in Canada. This was not reaffirmed in the 1910 Census for George where it indicated that his father (Richard) was born in England. The 1900 census record for Carrie Dempsie Heinze indicated that her father was born in England. However the 1920 census record for Carrie Dempsie Heinze indicates that her father Richard was born in Scotland and his mother tongue was Scotch. I believe there is some element of "truth" in these records. We also have to keep in mind the credibility of the informant.

What to make from all of this? In searching for the birthplace of Richard Dempsie, we have to prove or disprove the information that we have gathered. We need to create a scenario from this information so we can focus on areas to research. Therefore, for research purposes only, I can create the following scenario. Richard Dempsie may have been born in Northern Ireland, possibly Scotch-Irish decent. He first came to Canada as some of Scotch-Irish did. He may have spent some time in New York I have found no records to indicate that this was a Roman Catholic family, therefore Northern Ireland as Richard's place of birth is more likely. My grandfather, George M. Dempsie was a life long member of the Masonic order. If he had been a Roman Catholic, he most likely would not have become a Mason. I have begun my research in New York, Canada and Northern Ireland.

Summary

1. Before you start, gather as many records as possible, birth and death records, oral family history, cemetery records, information from city directories, Social Security applications, county histories, newspaper articles and obituaries. This will provide important clues as to where to begin looking and who you should be looking for.

2. Work back through time starting with the 1920 Census. Note discrepancies between census years. Keep notes as to why you think the discrepancies occurred. Verify all census records using other information you have gathered.

3. Understand that census takers were only required to fill out the census forms completely, NOT to make sure that the responses to questions were accurate or even reasonable. On occasion, census takers may have filled out a record for a family that they were unable to locate.

4. Carefully document all census information. Copies of the actual census record is best evidence (a copy of a soundex card is not acceptable evidence). Never rely totally on the research of others, no matter how credible they may seem.

5. Keep a log of research efforts to prevent duplication of effort and expense, particularly if you have to order census films or go a great distance to view them.

6. Read the history of the area in which your family lived.

7. Never substitute judgment for fact. If you substitute judgment for fact, over a period of years and particularly if you have passed this information on to others, judgment becomes fact.

8. Most important! Many researchers are absolutely convinced that they are beginning with the correct information even though it cannot be verified with census records. Some even insist that the census records are wrong. Some patrons at the National Archives spend many frustrating hours researching with no results, refusing to take any advise. I have always adhered to the following rule:

“Never Be So Absolute That You Are Absolutely Wrong”

Arkansas Queries

General guidelines for submitting

- 1) Queries are limited to members only
- 2) Please submit no more than one query per calendar year
- 3) Keep the query to approximately fifty words
- 4) Neatness counts! If possible, type, double spaced. Otherwise, print legibly leaving a space between each line.
- 5) Capitalize surnames
- 6) Remember the 4 W's"
- 7) Who - Give complete names of interest

What - What do you want? Keep it short and to the point

Where - Locality in ARKANSAS

When - Give a time period

Since we always work with a large backlog of queries, we strive to print them in the order in which they were received. It may be several months, however, before your query appears. We do use all queries received in a calendar year by the end of that year. We continue to receive queries with no name and address included. If the query gets separated from the envelope, we cannot use it. It simplifies the work of the all-volunteer staff of this publication if you send your query with your membership fee to Arkansas Genealogical Society, P. O. Box 908, Hot Springs, AR 71902-0908.

International Vital Records Handbook (Births, Marriages, Deaths), 4th Edition, by Thomas Jan Kemp, Genealogical Publishing Co., Inc., 1001 N. Calvert St., Baltimore, MD 21201, $34.95 + $3.50 for first book and $1.25 each additional book, 603 pages, soft cover, Maryland residents add 5% sales tax and Michigan residents add 6% sales tax. Rates for UPS are $5.00 for the first book and $2.00 each additional book.

The International Vital Records Handbook is the first new edition in 6 years. More countries, new application forms, new data and over 200 more pages have been added to this edition. It is an excellent source as we genealogists always need birth, marriage and death certificates for our ancestors. This resource is used to order certificates from the vital offices, not only in the United States, but throughout the world, and you do not have to wait to receive an application form. These forms are the most current ones and can be copied for your use as they are the latest available with complete updated information.

New data has been added which includes current address and phone number, fax numbers, e-mail addresses and web sites, if available. Also included are the fees and starting dates of records.

This is a book that every library and genealogical and historical society will want to have in their collection. An excellent resource guide. [RSN]

Izard County, Arkansas Family History Book (2001) by the Izard County Historical and Genealogical Society; P. O. Box 306, Pineville, AR 72566. Price $59.95, plus $6.00 postage. 248 pages, hardbound, surname index, illustrations, photographs, maps, etc. Izard County was formed in 1825, making it one of the earliest in the state. However, all of the county records were destroyed in a fire in 1889. Consequently, researching Izard County family and local history has always been very difficult. This handsome new book by the local historical and genealogical Society goes a long way toward remedying this situation. The first section contains brief histories of area communities, churches, and schools. The remainder is devoted to numerous family histories and genealogies. The surname index makes it easy to use. It is especially noteworthy for its use of early Izard County photographs and is a major addition to the history of this region. It will make a fine addition to the library of anyone with Izard County roots. [RPB]

In Search of Your European Roots A Complete Guide to Tracing Your Ancestors to Every

Country in Europe, 3rd. Edition, by Angus Baxter, Genealogical Publishing Company, 1001 N. Calvert St., Baltimore, MD 21202 - 3897 (2001), paperback, 328 pages, with index and bibliography. This excellent work has long been a mainstay for American genealogists who were interested in researching their European roots. It acquaints its readers with various types of genealogical sources available county by county and explains where they are to be found and how to use them. This new edition includes for the first time URL (websites) of major European archives and other similarly organizations. It also deals with changes brought about by the fall of the Iron Curtain and the recent Baltic Wars. The price is $18.95 plus $3.50 postage. [RPB]

Kershner Kinfolk (2000) by W. E. Kershner, Kershner Family Association, 1449 Fox Run Dr., Charlotte, NC 28212 - 7125. Contact the author for pricing information. This paperback, "library edition" of the Kershner Family Newsletter, is the last volume in what the author called "the current series". It contains volume 18. Each individual number is completely indexed. If you are interested in the history of this family, now is the time to contact Mr. Kershner, who is retiring from this publication. [RPB]

History and Genealogy of My Family, Vol. I, by Dr. Kenyon B. De Greene (2000), approximately 400 pages, no index. Contact the author at 4345 Chaumont Rd., Woodland Hills, CA 91364 for pricing information. This paperback contains information on the large number of families that compose the author's genealogy. Just a few family names are: Agee, Anderson, Atkinson, Batte, Belcher, Binion, Blackforne, Bowen, Buchannan, Buckley, Chastain, Collins, Cook, Corn, Cranbroke, Crow, De Greene, Deming, Dennis, Dickinson, Dix, Drake, and Dunn. Many of these families have early Virginia roots. The author's Arkansas families include Moloy, Pool, Drake, and Gailey. The book is composed mostly of the author's family group sheets. Kinship [RPB]

It's All Relative, 2nd Edition (2000) by Jackie Smith Arnold, published by Genealogical Publishing Company, 1001 N. Calvert St., Baltimore, MD 21202 - 3897. The price is $9.95 plus $3.50 postage, 123 pages, with charts and an index. This little paperback is another one of those basic works that should be in the library of every dedicated genealogist. It tackles such problems as determining just who is your "second cousin twice removed", the kind of problem that can cause a genealogist to tear his or her hair out. Other questions addressed are "kinship groups", "different kinds" of families, and name changes women take on when they marry. [RPB]

Index of Death Notices [in] the Arkansas Gazette 1915, 2) Index of Death Notices [in] the Arkansas Gazette 1916, and 3) Index of Death Notices Found in the Arkansas Democrat - Gazette July 1 - Dec. 31, 2000, by Oscar G. Russell, 506 Loop Rd, North Little Rock, AR 72120 - 2216. Each volume is about 300 pages in length and is available in either hard or soft cover. These are more publications in Mr. Russell's series of very fine indexes of deaths reported in what was at one time Arkansas' largest newspaper. These works are comprehensive and contains all of the deaths reported in Arkansas and as well as other states. The cost for the 1915 and 1916 volumes are $35.00 each softbound and $45 hardbound. The volume for 2000 is $21.00 for soft cover and $34.00 for hard cover. Contact Mr. Russell for a list of all of his publications. [PB]

Descendants of Bartholomew Stovall (1655 - 1722) First Five American Generations compiled by Donald E. Bishop, 21 Flem Phillips Rd., Laurel, MS 39443 - 9142, 396 pages, soft bound, with full name index. Contact the author for pricing information. This excellently printed and presented family history traces the author's ancestors from Bartholomew Stovall, who was born in 1665 in England, and who arrived in Virginia in 1684 to now. From Virginia the family spread out across the country. Other families included are Burton, Hatcher, and Bishop. [RPB]

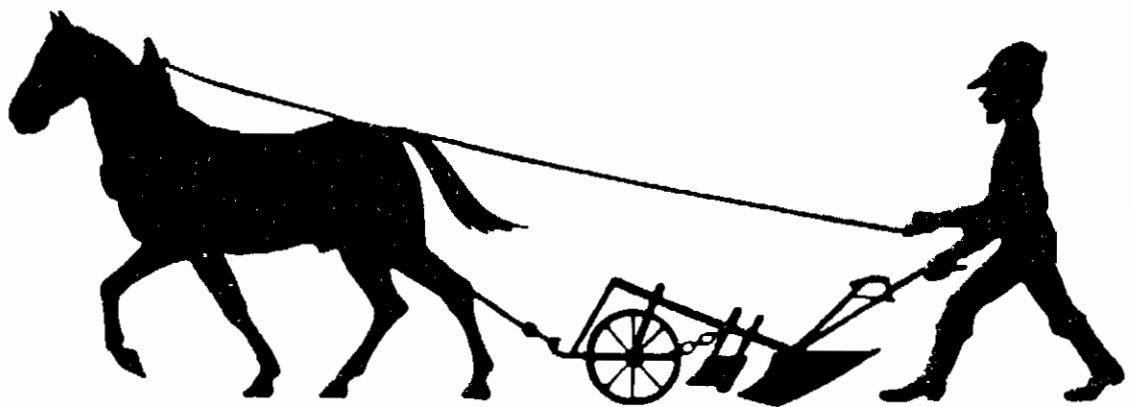

The Family of Charles Holt and Martha Ratliff Holt by Carri L. Vance, PMB #250, 9141 E. Stockton Blvd, Suite #250, Elk Grove, CA 95624, $55.00, which includes postage and handling, 460 pages, photographs, and a full name index. This excellent family history is presented in a narrative form that begins tracing the author's family beginning with William and Martha Ratliff Holt, who were living in Franklin County, NC in 1785. Members of the family later lived Tennessee, Alabama and to Newton and Carroll counties in Arkansas. [RPB]

Black Slaves and Early Freedmen of Hempstead County, Arkansas 1819 - 1850 by Linda McDowell. Available from Jubilee, Inc, 14617 Sara Dr., Little Rock, Arkansas 72206. Price $20.00. Arkansas residents add 6.24% sales tax, $3.50 postage. 140 pages, soft cover, full name index. MS McDowell has produced a very significant work on early African American history in Arkansas. It abstracts the names and other information on hundreds of African Americans, both slave and free, who lived and worked in Hempstead County in southwest Arkansas before the Civil War. Most of the information is taken from bills of sale and list grantor and grantee, date of sale, amount of sale, etc. as well as the name, age, and often family relationship of the slaves. Just one example will show the remarkable information contained in the volume. In March of 1845 Norbone T. Melson sold to John Bennett and Phillip Rainey, one lot of slaves: "Edmund, age about 20 years old, one Negro woman with her five children to wit, Nancy, Sally, Phinny, Stephen and Louisa, one Negro man Burnell about 40 years old and his wife Barry also one woman Peggy about 16 years old and Lucy about 8 age ... and one Negro named Robert about 40 years old and his wife Fanny also one other Negro woman Betsy about 18 years of age and her child". Linda's full name index makes this an even more valuable work. It is the first in what is hoped will be a long series of such abstracts. [RPB]

1) Hempstead County, Arkansas Cemeteries Book 5 and 2) Hempstead County, Arkansas Abstracts of Wills, Intestate, and Other Probate Records

1822 - 1917 by the Hempstead County Genealogical Society, P. O. Box 1158, Hope, Arkansas 71802 - 1158. Both volumes are soft cover and are fully indexed. The cemetery volume contains 226 pages and the will abstracts contains 136 pages. Each costs $20.00. These well-published books are a credit to this local genealogical society. Hempstead County is one of Arkansas' oldest counties and was on the road to the golden west. Many of its early settlers later became pioneers in Texas and Oklahoma. The cemetery volume contains interments from cemeteries in Ozan, Saline, Spring Hill, and Water Creek townships, including the historic Old Washington area. The abstract volume contains a wealth of information on slaves, land, heirs, etc. [RPB]

COURSE INFORMATION

Finding Genealogical Sites on the Internet will ease your search for helpful sites in your quest for genealogical information.

Freedman's Bureau Records – A Source for Black and White Alike will explain these records, their availability, and how to use them for southern research during and following the Civil War.

Conservation and Storage of Genealogical Documents and Artifacts will provide information you need to preserve and safely maintain those precious family papers and articles.

Dating, Preserving, and Storing Family Photographs will cover the basics the genealogist needs to know to estimate the date of a photograph and conserve it and store it properly.

Joining Lineage Societies: DAR, SCV, and UDC will provide three experts to inform you on the ins and outs of applying for membership in lineage organizations.

Using Records in the National Archives: A Researcher's View will explore the use of guides and preliminary inventories, many of which are available locally, to help you access National Archives records.

If Grandpa Wore Grey: Confederate Records at the National Archives will set to rest those speculations about what Confederate records are actually held by the federal government.

But Grandma Never Carried a Gun: Locating Women Using Records Created by the Military will give you some fresh ideas about how to find that elusive female.

Overlooked Revolutionary War Records at the National Archives will provide the information you need to access the most helpful records.
